About the role

The position supports the delivery of the Community Court on the Groote Archipelago by working closely with members of the Groote Archipelago Law and Justice Group to facilitate culturally informed and community-centred justice processes. The role contributes to a collaborative model of sentencing that brings together the court, legal professionals, victims, offenders, service providers, and community members to ensure decisions are grounded in cultural knowledge and local context.

By assisting with the coordination and operation of Community Court sessions, the position helps advance key goals such as reducing re-offending, improving compliance with court orders, addressing the over-representation of Aboriginal offenders, and strengthening rehabilitation outcomes. In doing so, the role plays an essential part in supporting a “whole of community” approach to justice and enhancing pathways for safer, stronger community environments.

Key Responsibilities

- Community Court: Engage Law and Justice Group members to participate effectively in Community Court, to strengthen culturally informed sentencing processes, by building strong relationships, encouraging involvement, and ensuring their voices and knowledge are incorporated into proceedings.

- Reporting: Generate reports, including Aboriginal Experience Reports, to provide the Court with culturally grounded insights that inform sentencing outcomes, by collecting accurate information, synthesising community perspectives, and presenting findings in a clear, structured format.
- Defendant Support: Provide support to defendants to enhance their understanding of and participation in the Community Court process, to promote fairness, empowerment, and improved compliance, by guiding them through required steps, clarifying expectations, and connecting them with appropriate resources.
- Collaboration: Identify and collaborate with all relevant stakeholders to ensure a coordinated, whole of community approach to justice, to improve outcomes and strengthen communication, by maintaining active partnerships, sharing information appropriately, and participating in multi-agency discussions.
- Data Collection: Undertake report writing and data collection to support the work of the Law and Justice Group, to ensure accurate documentation and continuous improvement, by maintaining organised records, analysing information, and preparing summaries that inform decision-making and program delivery.
